

Making Media, Making Meaning:
Zines and Critical Consciousness in Young Women

Senior Work Project
Eugene Lang College
Cultural Studies Concentration

By
Eleanor Whitney

New York, New York

May 12, 2005

Advisor: Rasmia Kirmani

Acknowledgements

I am grateful to the many people who have assisted, advised, encouraged and helped this project from its conception to final form. Specific thanks is in order for: Rasmia Kirmani for advisement, editing, critical questioning, immense scholarly knowledge, belief in the project and support; Emily Kramer and Britt Zanetis for forming a “Senior Work Study Group” to help meet goals, stay on track and offer emotional support; Lauren Martin for her belief in critical theory, understanding of the importance of intersections and praxis and devotion to the world of independent publishing; Professors at Eugene Lang College and the Graduate Faculty including Gary Lemons, Jane Lazarre, Amit Rai, Gregory Tewksbury and Ann Stoler for providing me with critical research tools and a belief in the academy as a potentially transformative space; Ingrid Dahl for sharing her work and passion for young women’s cultural production; Sarah Evans for lending articles and advice; Kpoeone’ Kofi-Bruce for her critical thought about the history and present of feminist, independent media; Irene Villaseñor for her tireless work to support and train youth working with independent media, Emily Larned for understanding aesthetics and content are not exclusive; Christian Schmidt for tireless scholarship on zines; Elke Zobl for creating a invaluable resource in the Grrrl Zine Network; Nicole Solomon for lending books and helping ignite my critical consciousness; Jonny Cope for lending books, research advice and support through the early stages; Rebecca Gilbert, Pablo de Ocampo and the Independent Publishing Resource Center for their energy, excitement and belief in the world of independent publishing; the Portland Zine Symposium for demonstrating the continued viability and diversity of zine culture; Booklyn for being “better read than dead”; the zine editors whose work I use in this paper who continuously produce challenging, beautiful and thought provoking publications; to my parents Rosemary F. and Robert H. Whitney for their support of all my artistic and educational endeavors; and Kerry Downey for her artistic vision and unwavering belief in this project and its creator.

Making Media, Making Meaning:
Zines and Critical Consciousness in Young Women
Table of Contents

Acknowledgements	ii
Introduction: Zines as Documents of Personal Survival	1
Section I: History and Context	7
Why Make a Zine?
Rebellious Communication: A Brief History of Radical Print Media
Early Radical Print Media in the Western World
Feminist Media in the 20 th Century
Do-It-Yourself: Fanzines, Zines and Making a Scene
Fanzines: Havens for Geeks, Obsessives and Drop Outs
Revolution Grrrl Style Now!: Riot Grrrl Zines
The Growth of Zine Culture in the United States
Zines in the Mainstream Media
Zines and the Allure (and Necessity) of the Handmade in a Digital Age
Corporate Control of the Mass Media
Negotiating Culture and Power: Young Women and the Study of Subculture
Hierarchy and Privilege in Zine Culture
Section II: The Power of Autobiography and Anti-Racist Feminist Theory	31
Invading and Informing: Autobiography and Theory
Centering Intersections: Feminist Theory from an Anti-Racist Standpoint
Cultural Appropriation and Eating the Other
The Possibility of Solidarity and Communication Across Difference
Section III: Zines as Sites for Shared Struggle and Dialogue	45
Reflections of Intersections: Zines as sites for critical consciousness of identity
Autobiography and Examining History
Zines as Sites for Critically Confronting White Racism

Breaking Culturally Imposed Silences: Challenging Stigmas Around Body Image,
Mental Health and Sexual Abuse

Challenging Damaging Images of Womanhood

Problematizing Sanity: New Conceptions of Mental Health

Living Theory, Breaking Silence: Challenging Sexual Assault

Section IV:

Zines and Formulating Social Change: Inside and Outside of the Classroom...62

Compilation Zines: Documenting and Addressing Communities in Struggle

Conclusion 70

Appendix A: Glossary of Terms 74

Appendix B: Sample Workshop Curriculum Using Zines 75

Appendix C: Zine Publishing Resources 81

Bibliography of Works Consulted 82

Bibliography of Self Published Works Cited 85